ROYAL ARMY ORDNANCE CORPS

SUPPORTS THE ARMY OF THE '60s

Ex-Boys Association

ORDNANCE JUNIOR LEADERS

You can't start too early in the Royal Army Ordnance Corps. Boys between 15 and 16½ years of age can join the Ordnance Junior Leaders Battalion. Here they are trained to become the backbone of the Corps—N.C.Os. and Warrant Officers. Many become commissioned officers. In the Battalion boys receive military, educational and trade training. Great emphasis is placed on sport and adventure training. All boys have the opportunity to learn to drive before they leave the Battalion.

On top of all these opportunities to build a fine career—boys are paid, clothed, fed and housed free of charge and have 70 days paid holiday a year. Too good to be true? No—the Ordnance believes in looking to its future—and the Junior Leaders are this future.

Over the top — an Ordnance Junior Leader keeps fit for the future.

Ex-Boys Association

Good friends and an outdoor life.

A hard climb to the top — Junior Leaders in S[illegible]

Ex-Boys Association