Introduction and Welcome

Dear Members,

A very warm welcome from our Founder and Chairman Paul Jones, all your Association Committee Members who work behind the lines, George Tether, Bill Chamberlain, Dave McCarthy, Brian Wild, Allan Jones and lastly, me the Editor of the Ex-Boys' Association Newsletter, Adrian Hayward-Wills, to the Twelfth Ex-Boys' Association and Winter Edition Newsletter for 2009.

We hope that this Twelfth Newsletter finds you well and looking forward to Christmas and to reading articles on The Junior Drum Major and his Mace and an interesting article submitted by Ex-Boy and Association Member, Peter Roberts on his experience as a Bugler on the BBC show talent show know as "Top Town".

And lastly, an article on former RAOC Junior Leader, Paul Bunker, who was KIA in the Falklands War of 1982, as an SAS Corporal.

As you know, it is our intention to produce two Newsletters (Summer and Winter) per annum, with a publication in June and December of each year. This Winter 2009 Ex-Boys' Association Newsletter provides a further format to reach its members in addition to our extensive and ever expanding website.

The Summer Newsletter 2009 was received with rave reviews! Below are some of the kind comments I and the Committee received:-

"Thank you, this was my first newsletter and it is quite excellent. I found the "Last Post" very touching, Norman Bruce had been my Platoon Commander (Stephens) and I bumped into him on several occasions post Jnr Ldr Bn, he never forgot a face and spoke as if he had only seen you the day before".

ML

"Many thanks for an excellent Newsletter".

DC

"Thank you for the newsletter, it is great to keep and be kept in touch. Today, at almost the anniversary of D-Day and that is also the anniversary of the day I joined No.7 Squad Enlisted boys in 1944 - I contacted the only "Old Boy" that I can find, still alive and living in England, Mr. Frank Barton who joined on the same day and we spent a lonely but pleasant evening in an empty barrack room in Parsons Barracks awaiting the remainder of the Intake".

LN

"Well done to all concerned with the Newsletter. The site is going from strength to strength – brilliant".

AP

"Congratulations! Great reading! So many interesting topics - Regards to all Committee members, with thanks for the many hours spent in keeping the Association so active."

B A-M

"I too have read quite a bit of this summers newsletter, and a very absorbing read it is too. My time in "Boys Service" was such along time ago that my memory fails me as to the highlights of any part of it, however it is good to read of the exploits of those that followed us, life was certainly improved for the, and proved far more adventurous than anything we could have dreamt possible".

BW

In this Winter Newsletter, you will also find extensive information pertaining to the 3rd Bi-Annual Reunion in 2010, the Reunion is well worth a try. Not been before? Well, never be afraid to try something new; remember, the Ark was built by amateurs and the Titanic by professionals!

Clearly we are always on the look out for interesting "copy". Should you wish to include any articles for the Newsletter, please feel free to contact The Editor Adrian HW via the Contacts Page on our website which is www.juniorleadersraoc.co.uk

EX BOYS' FORUM

Did you know, that in addition to this Bi-Annual Newsletter, there is another area in which there is more up-to-date information that provides members with information pertaining to ALL the new photos that have been uploaded, new Thunderbolt Magazines donated and to recently joined members to the Ex-Boys' Association? Well, this arena is entitled "Ex Boys' Forum".

The Forum for members is not only easy to navigate but it provides up to the minute information relating to the Ex-Boys' Association and to RAOC and REME matters as a whole. Information that is posted on the Forum Part-1 Orders is the best way to follow with what's happening and who's new to the Association. Below is a screen capture of said Ex-Boys' Forum.

Membership

Our Founder and Chairman Paul Jones is delighted to report that membership has grown continually and at a steady pace and now fast approaching the magic 500 members, with a grand total 494 Members!

We are of course absolutely delighted to announce that membership continues to grow on a worldwide basis, as can be observed on the above map. However, Bill Chamberlain needs more leads from you, including former permanent staff other ranks and officers – please see Lost Pals section further on in the Newsletter. Below is a record of our current membership growth – From Strength to Strength!

A lot of time and effort by the Committee Members - on a purely voluntary basis - is spent "behind the lines" on recruiting and processing ex-boys to become members of the Association. This is either conducted by a direct mail process or via a telephone call.

General Information

There are now quite a few new web sites that have information associated with the RAOC, REME and RCT. Additionally, there are many ex-boys and permanent staff from the RAOC, REME and RCT that do not know of these different sites or whom do not use a computer. If you know anyone who is an ex-Boy or Junior Leader or perhaps an ex-member of the Permanent Staff, then please try and pass them on any information to assist our organisation to grow and expand our site and find a venue for them to meet up with old friends and former colleagues.

If on browsing the site you recognise any faces in the photographs or perhaps there is a mistake in a location or name of an individual, please feel free to inform the Site Administrator so that we can update the information. Additionally, if you can remember any names and dates of people who served with you, we would also like this information to complete the roles for historical purposes.

If you have any recommendations to improve the Website or this Newsletter, please feel free to provide your ideas for consideration via www.juniorleadersraoc.co.uk

RAOC Association

In 2007, the RAOC Charitable Trust converged with The RLC Association Trust and RAOC funds were transferred to the RLC. These funds and those of the RPC, ACC and RLC are invested as a long term reserve.

Income from the RLC Days Pay Scheme supports benevolence, fraternity activity and administration of the Forming Corps Associations, managed by the RLC RHQ Secretariat.

The RAOC continues to maintain two committees; the RAOC Council which replaced the Board of Trustees, and the RAOC Association which continues to function as before.

The Association aims to create and cherish comradeship, foster the interests of members and their families, look after those who suffer hardship by maintaining contact with members and the appropriate welfare agencies, which includes; SAAFA, the British Legion, RLC Benevolence and the Army Benevolent Fund.

Regular meetings, social events and the twice yearly RAOC Gazette provide the means for all members to contribute to the successful achievement of these aims.

The Association has 21 Branches with approximately 2500 members! There are 15 regional branches which cover the following areas: Ashchurch, Berks/Hants/Surrey, Bicester, Birmingham, Chilwell/East Midlands, Corsham/Bristol, East Anglia, Isle of Wight, Kington/Didcot, London, Merseyside, Newcastle, Salisbury, Scotland and York.

In addition to these local branches there are a further 6 branches with country wide membership; RD & MTI, RAOC On Line, Golf Society, Rugby Football, TA and the Vehicle Specialist Fellowship.

All these branches run their own social gatherings while there are two main events each year which are organised centrally: the Association Reunion, AGM and Dinner in April, and Corps Sunday in July.

Membership is open to all personnel of the Regular and Territorial Army who served in the RAOC, RASC/RCT, RPC, ACC and RLC. Former members of the ATS and WRAC who served with the RAOC will also be most welcome to join. Membership fees vary and are paid to the branches.

The RAOC Officers' Club, which remains independent of the RLC, has 750 members and holds its AGM and Dinner in October each year, membership costs just £5.00 per year.

Veterans win fight for “smart” ID cards

Four million ex-servicemen and women to get priority for health, housing and benefits

This was an article published in The Independent (March 2009) concerning ID Cards for Veterans! I thought that members of the RAOC and REME Ex-Boys' Association may be interested to know of.

“Four million former servicemen and women are to be given veterans' cards to ensure they get priority treatment for NHS healthcare and housing, and discounts for services such as transport.

The Ministry of Defence plans to introduce the cards at the beginning of 2010, The Independent has learnt, in an attempt to begin repairing the damage done to the military covenant between nation and armed forces under New Labour.

The launch is expected to be formally announced this autumn with the first veterans' cards handed to new armed forces leavers in spring next year, before being rolled out to the country's four million former service personnel.

The aim is to ensure that those who have risked their lives in combat get front-of-the-queue treatment and financial benefits. Similar systems in the US and France offer veterans subsidised travel and discounts from private companies.

At a time when the armed forces have been stretched to breaking point in two bloody conflicts, there has been mounting anger that the priority treatment promised by the Government 18 months ago has failed to materialise. "We now need to make it happen," the Defence minister Kevan Jones told this newspaper. "We will provide veterans' ID cards so the person can say 'I have served in the services' and get priority access to treatment." Mr Jones spoke in response to this newspaper's campaign to get better mental health treatment for traumatised troops, launched after the Victoria Cross winner Johnson Beharry – the country's most decorated serving soldier – revealed his own combat-related trauma and urged the Government to stop failing his fellow soldiers with sub-standard or non-existent care.

Lieutenant General Sir Freddie Viggers, who until last year was Adjutant-General in charge of personnel, welcomed the veterans' card. "It is about value and self worth, not about a piece of plastic," he said. "We carry these cards for the whole of our service and when we leave we are required to hand them in. Psychologically, it is a bad thing. It is a little bit of plastic but it represents who you are and what you did."

The Conservative MP Patrick Mercer, former commanding officer with the Worcestershire and Sherwood Foresters Regiment, said: "It is about bloody time. At last, a reasonable, sensible minister [Mr Jones] who listens to ideas from across the political spectrum."

The categories in the Forces Discount Scheme currently include some retraining, sports clubs, childcare, insurance, holidays and travel.

Veterans and senior soldiers have called on the Government to acknowledge a predicted "explosion" of traumatised troops from recent conflicts and provide specialist mental healthcare. "No one is suggesting there is not a problem," Mr Jones said, "but we need a grounded debate to understand it."

He admitted that many former servicemen were "lost" in the NHS system and vowed to ensure every GP was made to record whether or not a patient had served in the forces

However, he refused to concede that former service personnel needed separate, dedicated care and risked the wrath of charities by suggesting they should fund provision of military health advisers. "Combat Stress [the charity] gets £3m of taxpayers' money. I don't think the Government should do it all. It is not about money. It is about the system working better."

British Veterans Recognition Card

Further to the Independent Newspaper article, members of the Ex-Boys' Association may be interested to know of the British Veterans Recognition Card. Which I hasten to add is at cost to the individual!

"A Veteran of the British Armed Forces is defined by the Government, as any person of any age who has served in the Armed Forces. As a veteran you may at times have wished for your old Identity Card."

Research has indicated that many Ex-Servicemen and Women aspire to having their former service recognised and would welcome the opportunity to carry a form of identification.

Additionally, proof of former service can unlock existing discounts on certain services and products both within the United Kingdom and abroad".

Subscription to "The British Veterans Recognition Card" scheme also provides access to a unique range of bespoke discounts which they have negotiated on your behalf. Their aim is to improve your quality of life and reduce your cost of living by forming partnerships with a wide range of companies who are keen to support Veterans and recognise the unique contribution you have made to your Country.

For example, you could be eligible for a 25% discount on your next holiday or save 50% the next time you take the family out to lunch.

Below is a scan of the front page of the 2009 Winter Edition of Combat Stress News, readers of the Ex-Boys' Association may be interested to know, that this charitable organisation celebrated its 90th anniversary in 2009.

Combat Stress is the leading charity specialising in the care of British Veterans who have been profoundly traumatised by harrowing experiences during their Service career and who are suffering from poor mental health as a result. Since its formation in 1919, Combat Stress has helped almost 100,000 Veterans, drawn from all branches and all ranks of the Royal Navy, the Army and the Royal Air Force, as well as the Merchant Navy and Allied Services. They are currently working with almost 300 Veterans of the ongoing operations in Iraq and Afghanistan and demand for their unique services is rising sharply.

COMBAT STRESS

They fight our wars. We fight their battles.

WINTER 2009

90TH Anniversary
1919-2009

90 Years on

On 12 May 2009 we will be marking the foundation of Combat Stress, exactly 90 years ago. As I write, I have the early Minute Books of the Executive Committee in front of me with the first entry dated 1 November 1918.

On 12 May 1919 the Executive Committee met at 25 Berkeley Square, home of Mrs Emma Waddington (Chairman). Mrs G M Clarke, Mrs Blunt Beames, Major Pells, Mr Jones Allen, Mr G J Neal and Miss Heathcote (Hon. Secretary) were all present to hear that the Ex-Servicemens' Welfare Society had been registered. Renamed as the Ex-Services Welfare Society in July 1919, and later still as the Ex-Services Mental Welfare Society, the first Armistice Appeal was launched in 1920. By this time matters were well advanced for the purchase and opening of "No 1 Recuperative Home" on Putney Hill in March 1921.

The rest, as they say is history, a history of serious endeavour and achievement, and one in which I believe all of us who have been involved should take great pride. This includes all of those good people and organisations who have provided us with support over the many years we have been doing this very specialist and challenging work.

Many thousands of Veterans and their families have been helped. We receive many letters from people expressing their gratitude – just read the words of appreciation written before Christmas by the daughter of one of the Veterans we have been helping for many years:

My father was diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder a long time after he left the army. For many years living with him was almost unbearable. He is an alcoholic and suffered from terrible mood swings; one minute he would be fine but the tiniest thing would provoke terrible rage in him. When drunk, I would see the utter despair and fear he felt, but sober we would never speak of it. There seemed to be no one who would understand my father's reticence in speaking of emotional matters. Our doctor is lovely and really tried, but he just wasn't prepared to follow the advice. I think army people are bred to have a 'stiff upper lip' and maybe we as a family promoted that - I was terrified of hearing what he had to say. I still am, to be honest.

It was not until I was sixteen, when he was put in contact with his regional Combat Stress representative, that it felt like anyone could help us. It was only when Combat Stress got involved that my father agreed to try medication, and started going to the residential centre. This has totally changed our life, taking the most enormous burden off our family. When he suffered a really upsetting relapse a couple of years ago, we were frightened and felt very helpless. The NHS could only do so much, but you took over and made sure he was okay. I'm not sure what we would have done if he couldn't have gone to Tyrwhitt House.

Had it not been because your organisation really understands what an army man is like, all that pride and bravery and dislike of touchy-feely-ness, my father would not have got better. He seems to gain the most enormous support from spending time with other soldiers, who he respects, who have also suffered as he has. I never understood why my mother stayed with him, though she would speak of the tender and kind man he used to be. Thanks to you, I got to know that man for myself and it has been the most wonderful thing that has happened to me.

You have supported my family when no one else seemed able to. For that I will always be grateful.

I do not think I need say anymore, except to wonder if, at the time, our founders realised what a wonderful organisation they were creating, one whose purpose is as relevant today as it was all those years ago.

Items of interest – Corps of Drums

The (Junior) Drum Major and his Mace

An Article by Adrian Hayward-Wills

The position of Drum Major it would appear originated in the British Army with Corps of Drums in 1650. Military groups performed mostly duty calls and battle signals during that period, and a fife and drum corps, directed by the Drum Major, would use short pieces to communicate to field units. With the arrival of military concert bands and pipe bands around the 18th century, the position of the Drum Major was adapted to those ensembles.

Traditionally, a military Drum Major was responsible for:

- Defending the drummers and bandsmen (The drums and bugles were communication devices)
- Military discipline of all Corps of Drums members
- The Corps of Drums's overall standards of dress and deportment
- Corps of Drums administrative work
- Maintain the Corps of Drums's standard of military drill and choreograph marching movements

The Drum Major was also given duties in the battalion at several points in history, which included the administering of military justice (lashing), to any member of the battalion and collecting the battalion's post.

The duties of the Drum Major are recorded as early as 1683;

...hee is to receive his directions from the major of the regiment, at what hour he is to beat to the watch, when the dian, and when the tap-too, wherewith he is to acquaint the several drummers of companies and to appoint them by turns of their beatings: he is also to order them in what divisions each of them shall beat, when the regiment marcheth; and they are to obey all his directions punctually.

Responsibility, however, went with this extra remuneration, for 'when new Drums are issued, the Drum-Major must be directed, to take them entirely to pieces, in order to examine, if every part is formed in a proper manner, both for Sound and Service, that all Defects (should there be any) may be made good, before they are delivered to the Drummers.' [Cuthbertson op cit p122]

It would appear, however, that it was the shortcomings of the drummers themselves that compelled the authorities to institute the office of Drum Major to regulate the beats on which the Army's movements depended.

A warrant appears to have been published in 1610 and re-issued by order of King Charles I in 1632, to enforce the accurate beating of the 'English March';

...And the march of this our English nation, so famous in all honourable achievements and glorious warres of this our kingdome, in forraigne parts (being by the approbation of strangers themselves, confest and acknowledged the best of all marches) was, through the negligence and carelesnesse of drummers, and by long discontinuance, so altered and changed from the antient gravitie and majestie thereof, as it was in danger utterly to have been lost and forgotten.

The warrant goes on to '...set down and ordaine the present establishment hereunder expressed, willing and commanding all drummers within our kingdom of England and principalltie of Wales, exactly and precisely to observe the same, as well in this our kingdom as abroad in the service of any forraigne prince or state, without any addition or alterations whatsoever.' [Grose op cit Vol.II, p45]

The duties of the drum major were not just musical. It became customary, certainly in some regiments of foot, for the Drum Major to bring the regimental colours from their stand in the officers' mess and hand them over to the ensigns on ceremonial occasions. Similarly, it was the task of the Drum Major or the drummers to case and uncase the colours and to attach a laurel wreath if the colours were paraded on the anniversary of a battle honour. These tasks would entail both liquid and financial compensation from the ensigns. It is probable that this association grew from 'forming square', when the colours and drummers would be enclosed in the centre behind musket and bayonet.

In the British Army, a Drum Major holds the rank of Sergeant, Staff Sergeant (or equivalent), or Warrant Officer Class II. Royal Air Force Drum Majors hold the rank of Chief Technician (Sergeant in the Air Training Corps), except for the Senior Drum Major RAF, who is a Flight Sergeant. Royal Marines Band Service Drum Majors are Corporals, Sergeants or Colour Sergeants, except for the Corps Drum Major, who is a Warrant Officer Class I. The Drum Major is always referred to and addressed as "Drum Major" or 'Drummy' and not by his rank.

AT THE EDINBURGH TATTOO

Jnr. Cpl. Balchin, Jnr. Pte. Ruck.

From the Corps of Drums point of view we are also having a busy time. At the moment we are preparing for the Edinburgh Tattoo, an event in which we are extremely proud to participate, and everyone is looking forward to August. This Tattoo is world-famous and it will be a great experience for the Corps of Drums to take part. In addition, of course, we have our usual programme of summer engagements, so a busy time is envisaged for next term.

The following members of the House have been promoted to the ranks shown and we congratulate all of them: Jnr. Sgt. Underwood, Jnr. Cpls. George and Ince, Jnr. L/Cpls. Balchin and Pattison. We also congratulate an ex-member of Body House, in the person of Jnr. R.S.M. Wild, on his elevation to this well-deserved appointment.

To all ex-members of the House who are leaving at the end of the term we wish God-speed and the very best of luck for the future.

Please note – in all the Junior Drum Major pictures, the (2) two miniature drum sticks that are affixed to the Regimental Sash as a symbol of the Drum Major's original appointment

As you know, staffs and batons have long been recognised as marks of office. The earliest Drum Majors' staffs bear a striking resemblance to those of beades and footmen, having a very small head and thin shaft. Amongst the earliest in existence is that of the Honourable Artillery Company, presented by Sir Matthew Andrews in 1671. These staffs had the obvious practical application of clearing the way in front of a formed body of men.

The early staffs were plain, bearing a single title or device, but like so many articles used by the British Army, extra devices were added, and as battle honours were awarded from Gibraltar (1704-05) onwards, these too were engraved or placed on scrolls in the head or the shaft. In the late nineteenth century it became customary for senior officers to provide staffs at their own expense. These were naturally more ostentatious than those issued by the Army or used by the regiment quartered next door.

The Foot Guards continued, as in so many aspects of their dress and appointments, to use the issue item, a practice which they still maintain.

The staff is particularly useful for signalling commands to a Band or Corps of drums when their playing precludes verbal orders. As early as 1811 it was required that '...they should be attentive not to deviate in the most trifling degree from the time which will allow, within the minute, the exact number of steps prescribed by H M Regulations.' [Regulations For The Army 1811, cited by H G Farmer The Rise of Military Music, London, 1912, p74]

Whilst on the march, the Drum Major assumed a steady pace by continued movements of the staff which he was required to turn '...with an easy air once round, so as to keep time and plant it every fourth pace.' Here lies the origin of the distinctive 'stage walk' used by the Drum Major in slow and quick time on ceremonial occasions!

The addition of so many battle honours has meant that the modern staff is much heavier and harder to throw and spin than its earlier counterparts but whilst officially frowned upon, the practice of throwing the staff was condoned, if not encouraged, by a battalion's officers away from the barrack square.

An example of The King's Own Scottish Borderers mace, a standard pattern Army mace used by many regiments, with battle honours and regimental badge applied.

Again, the Foot Guards are an exception, in that it is considered disrespectful to the sovereign and undignified for a man appointed as state drummer to the monarch to toss or spin his badge of office. The Drum Majors of line regiments have shown fewer scruples, however, in performing the tricks within sight of Buckingham Palace

The insignia of appointment is four point-up chevrons worn on the wrist, usually surmounted by a drum. Staff/Colour Sergeants have a small crown between the drum and the chevrons and Warrant Officers have the larger crown from their rank badge in its place. Since the Drum Major is part of the battalion staff, he will wear a crimson sash instead of scarlet, and will dress as a Warrant Officer regardless of his rank.

Drum Majors have always been gifted showmen, but have at the same timeset an example in turnout and bearing. Tricks performed with the staff have become part of the folklore of the Army. Stories of these feats are legion; for example, the Drum Major Cox of the Essex Regiment was famed in the 1930s for throwing his staff over the barrack gates at Warley and retrieving it on the other side without even breaking step.

The Australian Army traditionally follow the appointments along the same lines as the British Army. The Drum Major is always an experienced member of the Australian Army Band Corps, usually with the rank Sergeant, Warrant Officer Class II or Warrant Officer Class I. However, the member of the unit with the highest or most senior of these ranks is not always the drum major. The ability of the Drum Major is the main condition for the appointment.

In the Royal Marines Band Service and in regimental corps of drums of the British Army, the Drum Major is always a side drummer (titled Bugler in the Royal Marines), and would normally be required to have passed a number of courses in music, military skills, and leadership throughout his military career before he would be considered for appointment as a Drum Major.

In the Corps of Army Music, Royal Air Force, United States Armed Forces and Canadian Forces, the Drum Major is not required to be a drummer, the appointment being held by any suitably qualified musician.

The mace derives from the medieval weapon of the same name and it was composed of a spiked head attached by a chain to a wooden handle. The mace was swung around the head to clear a path or to strike an unhorsed opponent.

This particular one is of the standard Army pattern, however it had the stoutest cane I have ever seen. All the parts of a standard army mace are made of brass! This makes for the heaviest weight possible as none of it is very thin. Notice that every single, silver battle honour is fastened by two brass nuts, not to mention the badges too!!

The crown is likewise made from brass. Just look at the size of the bolt, the strengthening riband retaining nut. The casting for the acanthus decoration is the crispest I think I have ever seen and was also brass but with a higher copper content. There was even a joint cover for the top of the shaft... shaped to fit the natural shape of the cane. This is all incredibly difficult to keep clean – even for Junior Leaders!!

THE CORPS OF DRUMS
JUNE 1988

Please note in this photograph the Boy Soldiers/Junior Leaders, of the Royal Corps of Transport and Royal Army Ordnance Corps. Initially formed as the RCT Junior Leaders Regiment in 1978 at Azimghur Barracks, Colerne, Wiltshire, they then amalgamated with the RAOC Apprentices Collage in 1986 to form Junior Leaders Regiment RCT/RAOC.

RCT and RAOC Corps of Drums amalgamated at the same time. However, they were disbanded in 1992 under "Options for Change". The uniform had changed back to Blue Tunic with Scarlet Collars and Cuffs, with the RAOC Collar Badges being worn.

The Home Service Helmets had been replaced by newly manufactured examples, identical to that issued to the RAOC Staff Band in 1986.

Please note how in this particular picture, the Drum Major is carrying his sword.

The mace has long been associated as a symbol of authority. The drum major uses the mace to convey signals to the pipes and drums. The Mace commands vary from regiment to regiment and historically have been handed down from drum major to drum major. Generally, starts, stops and counter march commands are similar amongst the regiments since these commands are those commonly used with massed bands and tattoos

The basic parts remain, although adapted. The parts of the mace are the finial, crown, crown collar, shaft, chain collar, chain and ferrule (Fig. 1). The top of the mace is called the crown, ball, or head.

Fig. 1: The Drum Major's Mace

The crown may be fashioned from Sterling Silver, chrome, silver-plated or gold plated metal. The crown may be topped with a metal finial that may take the form of a crown, rampant lion, eagle, shamrock, etc. The body or shaft of the mace may consist of Malacca cane, wood or fibreglass. The shaft may be wrapped in either chain, cord, or be left plain. The ferrule is the tapered cylindrical plated metallic piece at the bottom of the mace the proper length of the mace is shoulder height from ferrule to finial.

The major military regimental bands use ornate and heavy Malacca cane maces. The crowns are fashioned from Sterling Silver, may have the regiment badge affixed, as well as be engraved or adorned with the battle honours of the regiment. There are lighter cane maces that are favoured by world-class competition Drum Majors. Malacca cane maces tend to be weighted differently and are heavier than fibreglass maces. Malacca cane maces complete "the look" of a pipes and drums or regimental Drum Major

The National Archives and The Royal Corps of Transport

The National Archives is at the heart of information policy - setting standards and supporting innovation in information and records management across the UK and providing a practical framework of best practice for opening up and encouraging the re-use of public sector information. This work helps inform today's decisions and ensure that they become tomorrow's permanent record.

The National Archives is also the official archive for England, Wales and the central UK government, containing 900 years of history from Domesday Book to the present, with records ranging from parchment and paper scrolls through to recently created digital files and archived websites. Increasingly, these records are being put online, making them universally accessible.

Photographic History: – The Royal Corps of Transport

The RASC formed the largest serving Corps in the British Army. Its immediate predecessor was the Army Service Corps, 1869-1875 and 1888-1918 whose roots lay in the Royal Waggoners, raised in 1794 and it was consequently part of a long tradition of providing supply and transport services to the British Army. In recognition of its services during World War One the 'royal' prefix was granted in 1918.

It operated most of the Army's road transport, as well as having some responsibilities at sea and by air, and provided supplies such as rations, forage, fuel and petroleum products. The RASC was re-designated in 1965, becoming the Royal Corps of Transport, when it was joined by the Transportation and Movement Control Branches of the Royal Engineers. From this date, responsibility for providing all stores, together with barracks and fire services passed to the Royal Army Ordnance Corps and the RCT became responsible for the operation and control of all forms of transport worldwide.

The RASC Museum was established at Buller Barracks, Aldershot, in 1944, collecting photographs, archives and objects relating to the history of the Corps and its predecessor bodies. It was renamed the RCT Museum following the RASC's re-designation in 1965. These photographs, some of which are copies, have been obtained from a variety of sources including RASC (later RCT) Headquarters, ex-Corps members or their executors and the Corps Journal (known as The Waggoner after 1965), in which some are known to have been published.

In 1993, the Royal Corps of Transport, the Royal Army Ordnance Corps, the Royal Pioneer Corps, the Army Catering Corps and the Postal and Courier Service of the Royal Engineers amalgamated to form the Royal Logistic Corps. A new corps museum was built in 1995 to provide a home for the collections of each of the constituent corps.

The division of the photographs into two series is not based on content. Both series largely comprise photographs of personnel serving in the Army Service Corps, Royal Army Service Corps and Royal Corps of Transport. These have been taken in the UK and overseas, and include Volunteer and TA units. Official photographs form a large part of the collection, showing units and groups of personnel, and visits and inspections by military staff and royalty for example.

Items given by ex Corps members and by the Corps Journal (The Waggoner after 1965) include group photographs but also many informal pictures. Wherever possible units and individuals have been named. This is not a comprehensive catalogue for the RASC/RCT collection. Photographs allotted to other categories such as Corps History, Recruits, Groups and Training remain largely unlisted.

Photographs of personnel serving in units of the ASC, RASC and RCT, including volunteer and TA units, taken in the UK and whilst stationed overseas. A large number are official photographs, showing units and groups of personnel, visits and inspections by military staff and royalty, and also parades and exercises. Photographs donated by the Corps' Journal (known as the Waggoner after 1965) and ex Corps members include group photographs, as well as informal pictures.

Know Your Blazer Badge

Further to the last Newsletter article on Blazer Badges below are some REME badges available for the potential purchaser/collector. Please note the King's and Queen's Crowns and the old design REME badge. Next Newsletter, we will be discussing Blazer Badges of the Royal Corps of Transport.

Where the blazer is part of the armed service veterans' association, it is normal for a badge to be sewn to the breast pocket usually in the form of a wire badge and sometimes also regimental blazer buttons. Any two regimental blazers will very rarely be the same, as they are made up from different civilian sources and are not issued by any authority. These numerous REME eBay badges are a classic example!

This has come to be representative of the fact that the members of an association are now civilians but retain the bond that the badge represents. The standard colour is navy blue, although in some associations different colours are worn, such as rifle green for the associations of rifle regiments. Perhaps we should get one made up for the Ex-Boys' Association?

The past few months have again seen some very interesting and exotic items on eBay, below are some photographs that may be of interest to readers, items including the Royal Corps of Transport and the Royal Electrical Mechanical Engineers.

The RAOC Boy Soldiers and the BBC

Back in the mid 1950's, a small contingent of RAOC Boy Soldiers had the unique opportunity to appear live on BBC Television.

They appeared on a television series known as "Top Town." Ex-Boy Peter Roberts and member of the Ex-Boys' Association, was one of those Boy Soldiers who appeared. This article is about that occasion with Peter Roberts and the background to the "Top Town" series.

Peter Roberts

October 1954 - December 1957

Initially, Top Town was a radio and television series from the 1950s. Which is regularly credited as being a direct ancestor of the now famous "It's A Knockout." This cannot be denied, although it can be said that in some instances, the link has been over-stressed.

"Top Town" was, like "It's A Knockout" an inter-town competition but its focus was not on tests of physical endeavour. The series was a 'battle of entertainment' - essentially a talent contest: the town with the best variety acts winning each heat.

The series was produced by Barney Colehan, who would later devise and produce "It's A Knockout." Top Town was initially a radio programme but by 1954, it had transferred to television. Many reference sources claim that Top Town debuted on television in 1956, from which time it was produced at the BBC's new Dickenson Road studios in Rusholme, Manchester research would indicate that there were televised editions some two years earlier.

The series ran into the early 1960s and returned unexpectedly to the BBC schedules for a brief time in 1987.

Producer - Barney Colehan with the 1956 Top Town Trophy

The format for the series would eventually be mirrored by the first series of "It's A Knockout" although the 'top towns' were from all around Britain, rather than It's A Knockout's initial North of England competition. Top Town was broadcast once a month generally, commencing with first round heats, leading to quarter finals, semi-finals and then a grand final where the Top Town Trophy - based upon a Marconi Mk 3 television camera - was the prize.

The series was always transmitted live and only two editions have survived in the BBC Television Archives - the Leeds v. Soho 1st Quarter-Final from 1956 and an end of series retrospective from 1960 entitled Top Town Parade, which was presented by David Jacobs. These programmes are fascinating, if only as a snapshot of the 1950s BBC - halcyon days!

“Top Town” was clearly very much influenced by Music Hall, with amateur would-be megastars singing, dancing, performing comedy routines or magic tricks, even animal impersonations.

The show was presented at various times by Peter Haigh, Peter West and David Jacobs, with each team being given half the programme to convince the judges that they were worthy of progressing to the next round. The judges’ panel - not seen until the very end of the programme - comprised ‘professionals’, representatives of the viewers and guest judges. Each edition would conclude with the judges given their impressions and passing their verdict.

Alyn Aynsworth was involved on the music side, conducting the BBC Northern Dance Orchestra (and sometimes the BBC Northern Variety Orchestra). Occasionally, the series would leave the studio and go out on location - for instance, the 1956 Grand Final was held at the Royal Hall in Harrogate.

The series was quite a hit, so much so in fact, that it attracted attention from overseas. Producer Barney Colehan noted in 1976 that “when we started Top Town back in the Fifties, we found that foreign TV companies were coming over to watch” Then, in 1962, two French producers, Pierre Brive and Guy Lux, were so inspired by the local talent contests that they launched Intervilles on the French viewing public.

They developed it into a series of made-up contests resembling extravagant outdoor party games. It was an immediate success”. These things have a way of coming back and it was not many years before Colehan found himself producing the British adaptation of Intervilles’, “It’s A Knockout”.

Ex-Boy Peter Roberts, who was actually there, goes on to say that The BBC ‘s “Top Town” series in this instance, 1955 or 1956, was between two military towns, Aldershot and Catterick and was televised from a large hotel on the sea front in Blackpool.

Each town had to supply a few short “acts” and three Beauty Queens, (see my write up on the ‘Memories’ page of the web site).

RAOC Boys School were asked to provide an input and resulted in Myself, Terry Cook, Jim Boyes and Dave Pearce, all ‘Silver Buglers’, dressed in “Toy Soldiers” uniform, sounding ‘Retreat’ at the end of our session in the programme. We travelled by coach and were accompanied by Capt. ‘Perry Mason’ and Sgt. Jock Oddie.

We were the last act to perform and as this was “Live TV” we rehearsed many times before hand always without a hitch. Our moment of glory eventually came; but as we marched along the side of the indoor swimming pool to the stage, Davy Pearce’s ‘Mouth piece’ fell out of his bugle and into the pool. All was not lost, the three remaining managed to make enough sound and with Dave puffing out his cheeks we thought no one had noticed! Nothing however slipped by the attention of ‘Perry Mason’ and Dave lost his BBC wages as a result.

Peter mentioned to me that a Ms. Joan Regan had signed one of the photos - just visible in the photograph. Did you know that Joan Regan was born 19 January 1928, in Romford, Essex, England? Well, she was a popular singer in the UK during the 1950s and early 60s, with a particularly glamorous image, it was after working at various jobs, including one as a photographer's re-toucher, that Regan first made an impression on the music scene in 1953.

Her private recordings of 'Too Young' and 'I'll Walk Alone' gained her a contract with Decca Records, partly because she was thought to have a 'Vera Lynn sound'. Her first releases, 'Till I Waltz Again With You' and 'I'll Always Be Thinking Of You', were followed by 'Ricochet', on which she was backed by Ronnie Aldrich's Squadronaires. It made the UK Top 10, and led to the nationwide fame she achieved when she became the resident singer on producer Richard Afton's television series Quite Contrary, followed later by four series of her own Be My Guest programmes – well I didn't know that!

Below is a transcript taken from the memories page of Peter Roberts – which incidentally is “on line” and well worth a read!

“Terry Cook mentions our appearance on the BBC ‘Top Town’ series held in Blackpool at the Grand Hotel and I would like to add a couple of points. There were three ‘Beauty Queens’ from each town, Aldershot and Catterick, taking part. It was suggested that they should join us for a pre breakfast swim in the sea next morning.

The sea at Blackpool, in my experience, never rises above –10 degrees, there was an onshore wind whipping spray off the waves and we stood on the beach shivering. One of the girls decided to brave it and went in. I tested the water with my feet but no way was I about to catch pneumonia. Somebody had to go in to save our faces so Terry Cook took a run and dived in. His swim lasted about a minute as he joined the shivering girl wading back to the beach. Towels were borrowed from the ‘none swimmers’ in an attempt to hide the deep blue colour and to bring back the circulation.”

A ticket from the Quarter Final of “Top Town” between Leeds and Soho

In conclusion, Aldershot ran out the worthy winners and the whole team were treated to a seven-course meal in the hotel by our organising officer from the Aldershot Garrison!

Royal Army Ordnance Corps - TRAIN

In the last Newsletter, Summer 2009, Issue 11, there was an interesting article submitted by Peter Fellowes on RAOC trains. This issue carries an interesting photo of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II christening the engine (train) “Conductor”.

This particular photo was taken in 1978, the Diamond Jubilee of the Royal Army Ordnance Corps and the 25th year of Her Majesty agreeing to become the RAOC’s Colonel in Chief!

Did you know that there are 347 preserved mainline diesel locomotives in the UK based on various privately owned railways, as well as a few running on the main rail system? Well this website is intended to provide a photographic record of each of these engines as well as details of the lines on which they are based and details of any diesel events.

Below is a website address dedicated to Preserved Trains and in particular, the link below provides access to the RAOC trains.

Patriot Class train named:-

The Royal Army Ordnance Corps

LOCOMOTIVE No. 45505—"THE ROYAL ARMY ORDNANCE CORPS"

LT.-COL. C. S.
GILL, RAOC,
writes:—

This engine was one of the "Patriot" class built at the LMS Crewe Works in 1932. There were fifty-two engines of this class, and this one, on completion, bore the number 5949 until 1934, when it was renumbered 5505.

For the first fifteen years of its life the engine bore no name, but in 1947, under the policy of the LMS Railway to name some locomotives after Regiments and Corps, No. 5505 received the name "The Royal Army Ordnance Corps," and Corps crests presented by the Corps were mounted over the nameplates. After nationalisation in 1948, all engines of British Railways were renumbered and 5505 became 45505, retaining its name.

During the latter part of the last war, and since, most of the "Patriot" class engines received certain modifications, including the fitting of a larger boiler. But 45505 was not modified and remained as built until withdrawn from service during the week ending 2nd June, 1962, and dismantled for scrap.

The "Patriot" class was designed by Sir Henry Fowler, who was Chief Mechanical Engineer of the LMS Railway, and all the engines were engaged on express passenger work. "The Royal Army Ordnance Corps" was stationed at the Longsight Depot in Manchester and worked trains between Manchester, Liverpool, Hereford, London and Carlisle.

The nameplates were obtained for the Corps by the efforts of members of the Birmingham Branch of the Association and

Mr. George Dow of British Railways. One nameplate is now on display in COD Donnington and the second is at the Corps Museum. A photograph of the engine is on display in the entrance hall of HQ, COD Donnington, and a copy is with the Corps Museum. One of the original Corps crests has now been traced by Mr. George Dow and arrangements are being made by members of the Birmingham Branch of the RAOC Association to hand it over to DDOS Western Command.

The original plan of the RAOC Association members was to ask that this crest should be used as a trophy for a TA competition (as stated in August issue of THE GAZETTE) but the DOS has expressed a wish that it goes to the Corps Museum. This is obviously the rightful place for such a piece and would make a complete set consisting of nameplate, crest and photograph in the one setting. The author is indebted to Public Relations, British Railways and Mr. George Dow for the historical information given in this article.

24145047 Corporal Paul A. Bunker

Royal Army Ordnance Corps / Special Air Service

“D” Squadron SAS - Age 28

An article by Adrian Hayward-Wills

I recently attended an SAS Reunion and thought it appropriate to visit the Memorial Stone to former Royal Army Ordnance Corps Junior Leader, Paul Bunker, at the SAS Regimental Plot of St. Martin's Hereford and lay some flowers on behalf of all members of the Ex-Boys' Association.

Paul Bunker joined 22nd SAS Regiment in August 1976 (having enlisted in the Junior Leaders Battalion RAOC some seven years earlier) and was posted to 16 (Air) Troop D Squadron. He then later joined 19 (Mountain) Troop SAS in May of 1979 and served several tours in Northern Ireland, West Virginia, Florida, Bavaria and the Falklands. This article is about Paul Bunker's Falkland's war.

Background

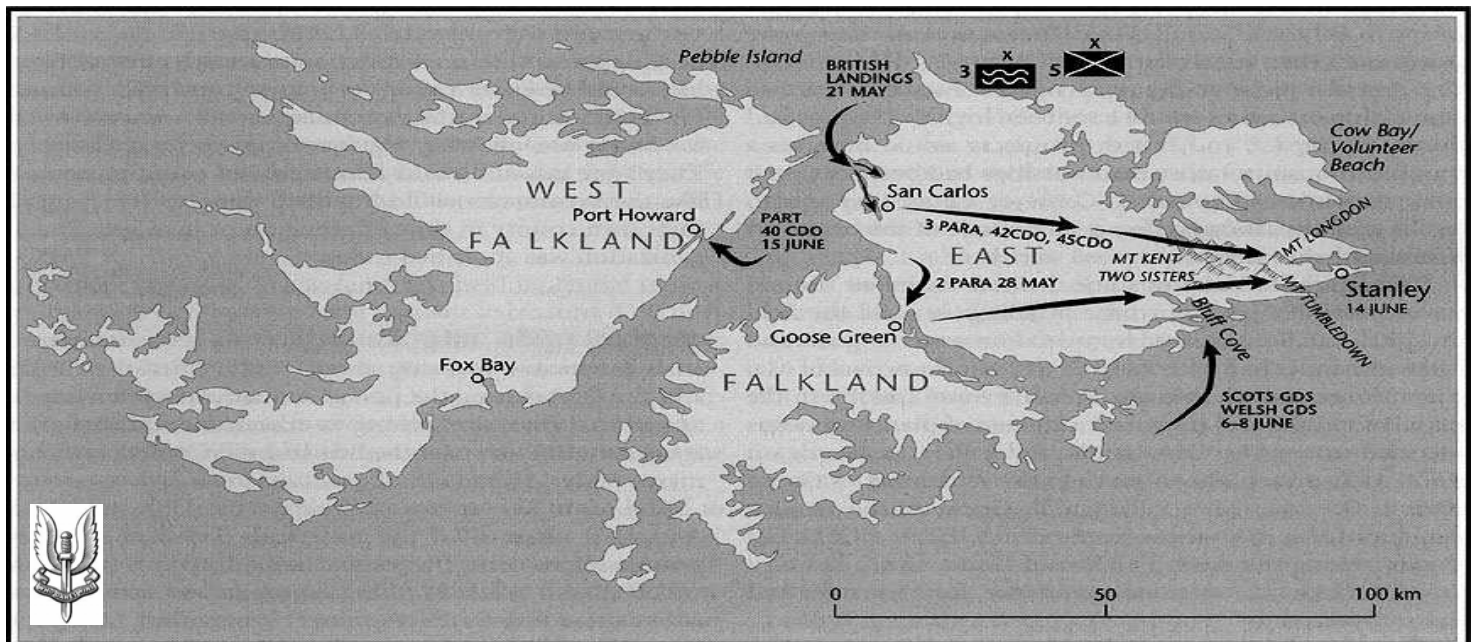

On the 5th April 1982, a large British task force set out on a 7,500-mile journey to liberate a group of tiny windswept islands in the South Atlantic. On 1st May 1982 began the biggest naval action to take place since World War II - nearly 900 men lost their lives. The Falkland Islands (Malvinas in Spanish) lie approximately 500 miles (805 km) east of southern Argentina, not as first thought by the majority of voting electorate as off the coast of Scotland!

Anyway, first sighted in the 16th century, they were colonized - in circumstances which remain contentious - by Britain, France and Spain. From 1833, they were in British hands, although sovereignty was claimed by Argentina on the basis of previous Spanish occupation. In 1982, East and West Falkland had a population of only 1, 800.

The climate was temperate but windy, the terrain a mixture of downland, rocky hills and peat bogs. The capital, Port Stanley, had a small airport, but was not unlike a Scots fishing village. Outside Stanley people lived in sheep-farming settlements. A mutton-packing plant at Ajax Bay on the west coast of East Falkland had fallen into disuse. Further east lay the Falklands Dependencies, South Georgia, and the South Sandwich Islands.

The 150th anniversary of British occupation came when the Argentine military was looking for an external adventure to rally national support after a deeply shaming 'dirty war' in which thousands of people suspected of subversive activities had been tortured and 'disappeared'. British policy had long been one of appeasement, trying to get the islanders to accept some kind of sovereignty-sharing with the mainland, upon which they depended for contact with the outside world. The final signal may have been the announcement that the symbolically armed ice patrol vessel HMS Endurance was to be withdrawn.

An underestimation of Margaret Thatcher may also have contributed to the decision to invade on 2nd April 1982, when Special Forces overwhelmed the 50-man garrison of Royal Marines at Port Stanley after a brisk firefight and a detachment on South Georgia, where the defenders damaged a frigate.

On 31st March 1982, Margaret Thatcher's government received warning that invasion was imminent and an early meeting suggested that while nothing could be done to prevent it, in the opinion of the First Sea Lord, Admiral Leach, the Royal Navy could send a 'retrieval force' rapidly. The decision to mount Op. CORPORATE was taken early and owed much to the Prime Minister's speedy determination.

The operation was controlled from the Navy's headquarters at Northwood near London by Admiral Fieldhouse and his staff. The idea of swift retrieval was soon replaced by one of deliberate attack and a Task Force was assembled, incorporating the old aircraft carrier HMS Hermes and the new HMS Invincible equipped with Sea Harriers and helicopters, other warships, Royal Fleet Auxiliaries and chartered Merchant Seamen.

The landing forces, under Major General Moore, would eventually comprise 3rd Commando Brigade (Brig Thompson), with three battalion-sized Marine Commandos and 2nd and 3rd Battalions of the Parachute Regiment under its command, and 5th Infantry Brigade (Brigadier Wilson), with 2nd Battalion Scots Guards, 1st Battalion Welsh Guards and 7th Gurkha Rifles. Special forces included the Special Boat Service and elements of the 22nd SAS Regiment - which included Paul Bunker ex-RAOC Junior Leader - and the Royal Artillery who furnished both Field and Air Defence Artillery.

The Argentine garrison was reinforced to comprise two brigades under Brig Gen Menendez, the islands' military governor. The British used Ascension Island just south of the Equator as a forward base, and on 18 April the main task group (Rear Admiral Woodward) sailed from it. On 12th April 1982, with two nuclear submarines in the theatre, Britain announced a Maritime Exclusion Zone around the Falklands. South Georgia was recaptured by Royal Marines and Special Forces on 24-5 April, and on 1 May 1982, a Vulcan based at Ascension Island (refuelling en route) bombed Stanley airport, inflicting little damage but demonstrated the RAF's long reach.

On the same day, aircraft from Woodward's task group attacked ground targets, while his ships came under attack from Argentine aircraft. On 2 May the old Argentine cruiser General Belgrano was torpedoed by the submarine HMS Conqueror south of the Falklands, after which the Argentine navy did not venture out of coastal waters.

On 4th May 1982, the Argentine air force sunk HMS Sheffield with an Exocet missile, and when the British landed around San Carlos on 21 May it mounted repeated attacks on warships in Falkland Sound. HMS Ardent and Antelope were sunk and other vessels damaged. On 25 May HMS Coventry, on radar picket to the north of West Falkland, was also sunk. Ship casualties would have been higher if bombs had burst on impact and British prospects would have been poor if troopships rather than warships had been lost. As it was, the sinking of Atlantic Conveyor on 25 May 1982 was to make land operations difficult: all but one of the heavy-lift Chinook helicopters she carried were lost.

The beachhead at San Carlos, which included the old meat plant at Ajax Bay whose buildings housed the field hospital, had been secured by 3rd Commando Brigade and its commander had been ordered to await the arrival of Maj Gen Moore and 5th Brigade. Pressure from London in the wake of naval losses provoked a change of plan and it was decided to send 45 Commando and 3 Para eastwards on foot, while 2 Para jabbed south to the settlement of Goose Green.

Meanwhile, having survived an horrific helicopter crash in appalling weather conditions on the Fortuna Glacier in South Georgia, Corporal Paul Bunker of the Special Air Service Regiment and his Troop, led the advance elements of the forces which captured the main enemy positions in Grytviken. This action resulted in the total surrender of all enemy forces in South Georgia. The next Troop Task was the Airfield.

Due to proximity of civilians close to the airstrip, the use of tactical air strikes was ruled out and the SAS were given the green light to conduct the raid. On the night of May 14th, D Squadron boarded Sea Kings from Royal Naval Air Squadron 846. Accompanying them was an Artillery Spotter from 148 Battery RA, who would direct gunfire from H.M.S Glamorgan onto the Argentine defenders.

Once landed on Pebble Island, the SAS force linked up with their Boat Troop colleagues who escorted them to the objective, using routes they had previously proved. Cut-off groups got in position to prevent the enemy leaving or counter-attacking the target area. A cover group, including a mortar team was established to keep any Argentinean defenders pinned down whilst the assault team went in.

As artillery fire from H.M.S Glamorgan and mortar fire from the SAS cover group slammed into the Argentine ammo and fuel dump, the assault teams moved onto the airstrip, placing explosives on the Argentine aircraft. The SAS placed their charges in the same part of each plane to prevent the Argentineans from cannibalising aircraft from spare parts. The assault teams also raked the parked planes with fire from M16s and M203 grenade launchers. Others fired 66mm LAW rockets at their targets.

A montage of the Falklands Conflict of 1982

The response from the Argentine Garrison, housed in nearby buildings was noticeable by its absence. The SAS attackers had expected a heavy fire fight but instead only received light return fire. Only 2 SAS men - including Paul Bunker - were lightly injured in the raid.

Some 30 minutes after the attack started, the SAS began to withdraw, leaving burning on the airstrip behind them ,6 Pucarás, 4 TMC Mentors and 1 Sky Van transport aircraft. In one action, the SAS had destroyed half of the Pucarás the Argentines had on the islands!

In short, Cpl Paul Bunker's Troop, successful and brilliantly executed raid on Pebble Island in the Falklands Islands, where eleven enemy aircraft were destroyed on the ground, was a huge success.

By acting quickly and decisively and with great courage and coolness, Paul Bunker was personally involved in the destruction of seven of the eleven enemy aircraft – his actions later depicted in a painting by David Pentland..

However, on 19th May 1982, the SAS Regiment suffered a tragic loss when a Sea King crashed while “cross-decking” troops from H.M.S Hermes to H.M.S Intrepid and killed 22 men. The Sea King had taken off from H.M.S. Hermes at dusk. The Aircraft was slightly over loaded but because it was short flight, the pilot reduced his fuel load (SOP) to lighten the helicopter.

At 300 ft, the Sea King started its decent towards H.M.S. Intrepid. those on board heard a thump, then another from the engine above them. The Sea King dipped once, then dived. Within four seconds it hit the water. Some men were killed instantly, Paul Bunker being one of those men and others knocked unconscious in the initial impact. Amazingly 9 men managed to scramble out of the open side door before the helicopter slipped below the waves. They were the only survivors.

Rescuers found bird feathers floating on the surface where the helicopter had impacted the water. It is thought that the Sea King was the victim of a bird strike. One theory being is the Sea King helicopter was hit by a Black Browed Albatross, which has an 8 ft wing span. The SAS lost 18 men on this night, including Cpl Paul Bunker, former RAOC Junior Leader and SAS Operator.

The SAS Regiment had not lost so many men at one time since the end of the second world war, the accident killed a member of the Royal Signals (264 (SAS) Signals Regiment) and the only RAF casualty of the war, Flt Lt G.W. Hawkins RAF.

The Clock Tower – Credenhill, Hereford where Paul Bunker's name is inscribed

“Corporal Paul A. Bunker of 22nd SAS Regiment (formerly of the RAOC) was one of twenty brave men, who lost their lives as a result of the tragic Sea King helicopter crash, whilst transferring between the carrier HMS Hermes to the assault ship HMS Intrepid on the 19th of May 1982”

Paul Bunker is also mentioned in Michael Asher's book "The Regiment – The Real Story of the SAS, The first Fifty Years" on page 462. And I quote...

".... The enemy set off a landmine that splattered turf and stones, hurling Cpl Paul Bunker, ex Royal Army Ordnance Corps, three metres into the air. Bunker hit the deck with only concussion and was dragged off by his mates...."

As a footnote note to this article, did you know that Vince Phillips – Bravo Two Zero fame, 1991 – was also a former RAOC soldier?

Indeed, Sgt. Vince Phillips is mentioned in the recent SAS book, SAS Heroes by former SAS soldier Pete Scholey. Vince has an entire chapter devoted to him and the book goes on to describe in detail, the ill-fated Bravo Two Zero patrol of the Gulf War in 1991.

Well, Sgt Vince Phillips - Joined the RAOC in 1972 and on completion of his basic training, Vince was posted to COD Bicester. Whilst serving at Bicester he developed into an outstanding cross-country runner which culminated in his winning of the Victor Lurdorum Trophy at the Corps Athletics. From COD Bicester, Vince moved to 16 Para Heavy Drop Company where he completed his Parachute Course at the end of 1972.

During his time with 16 Para Heavy Drop Company, he continued to demonstrate his outstanding qualities as an athlete and had the distinction of being a member of the Para RAOC team which won the Welsh 3000m in 1976 – The first RAOC unit to win the event! Perhaps there may be Members of the Ex-Boys' Association who knew Vince?

With the disbandment of Para Heavy Drop in September 1976, Vince volunteered to serve with the Commando Logistic Regiment and attended the All Arms Commando Course which he successfully passed in November 1976. Whilst serving with 3 Commando Brigade, Vince was awarded his Army Colours for marathon running.

In 1983, Vince applied for the SAS selection and after having successfully completed the course; Vince joined the Boat Troop of B Squadron SAS. The next 12 months saw Vince seconded to the Special Boat Squadron and after that, a tour in Northern Ireland before being despatched for special operations in the Gulf, where he tragically lost his life.

When Jenny Simpson married, she joined a unique band of women - the SAS wives - and entered a world of secrecy and danger few outside it could begin to imagine.

According to the front cover of the book, this is the book the Government tried to ban – however, quite conveniently it was serialised in the Sun Newspaper!!

In this autobiography she reveals the facts of life as an SAS wife - months without knowing where her husband was or whether their lives were at risk, having to check their car each morning for bombs and nursing her husband through malaria and the traumas of seeing his fellow soldiers die. In fact, much like any other British Soldier and his wife!!

Anyway, this book is the paperback version, which was later released as a direct result of the success of the first edition Hardback.

In this book you won't find fancy menus that an SAS wife might cook with her Hexamine Blocks or what colour curtains they had in the Married Quarters, just a book about being married to an SAS soldier.

Illustrated with photos including Paul Bunker etc, etc...

Synopsis:

This delightful and informative book is/was Bound in blue cloth with gilt lettering to spine and RAOC decoration to front board.

This is the fifth volume of the continuing history of the Royal Army Ordnance Corps and deals with the tumultuous years from August 1945 until the end of the Falklands War in 1982.

In carrying out its multifarious duties, the RAOC supported the Army and in some cases the other two services, in every theatre and operation during these thirty-seven years. Detailed Maps and various Black and White photographs accompany this factual book.

This history describes the duties of the corps both at home and in action in the numerous theatres of the wars that have occurred during that period including Suez, Korea, Northern Ireland as well as all the changes and reorganisations that took place in that time.

The front cover of this book many of you may recognise as being taken from the Shaun Steele painting showing troops of the RAOC at Ajax Bay, during the Falklands Campaign of May 1982.

There are several references to Boy Soldiers and Junior Leaders on pages 64 and 194. As a footnote to this review, it is perhaps interesting to note that the author of this book was the Inspecting Officer of the Passing Out Parade in August of 1973 and is clearly seen inspecting the Senior Platoon in the Summer Edition (No.5) of the 1974 issue of the “The Thunderbolt!” - Which incidentally is on line to view!

Synopsis:

Die Hard, Aby, tells the story of boy soldier Abraham Bevistein. Thorough in its research, every detail that remains of this short life seems to be laid before the reader, but rather than a file of facts, it is a story told with heart.

'Die Hard, Aby!' tells Aby's story, rather than that of the historic times through which he lived. If a well known battle rages while Aby sits in a trench several miles away, writing to his mum - we are with Aby. We follow him from the Russian occupied land of his birth, across Europe to his East End home, and then through school days and the events that led to the Great War. One of the first to join, we see him through training and on to duty at the Front.

We are with him in the mud of the trenches and share his deprivations through the cold of the winter of 1915. After 10 months in France, we see what led him to leave the Front without authority. We are with Aby again when as a 17-year-old boy he walks to his fate on a cold, March dawn in 1916. Finally we examine the impact his short life had on his times and on ours.

His letters to his mother almost speak from the pages, and one can almost feel the heartbreak and fear from 90 years ago. I recommend this book to anyone who wants an intelligent read, factual, true, and moving. Almost the last line of the book states that a person is not truly dead whilst someone is alive to remember him. I think that through this book, the story of Aby and others like him will continue, lest we forget!

Although much bad press has been given towards the many historians who have tackled the issue of Britain's 'boy soldiers' during the Great War, this book does much to reveal one soldier's story with dignity and well-informed evidence.

Not only is Lister's account of Aby's life and war antics incredibly moving but it is also unique in style, which makes this book another well-written page-turner to add to the list. A fantastic piece of work from David Lister, written for a wide audience, leaving the reader horrified by the fact that we let the boy's onto the frontlines.

Synopsis:

Since the emergence of the terrorist bombing campaign in Northern Ireland in 1969, the dreadful atrocities committed by both nationalist and loyalist paramilitary groups against civilian and military targets in the province have regularly made news headlines throughout the UK, and on occasions, across the world. Behind these headlines there is the story of the Army's bomb disposal operators and how they have worked bravely and tirelessly to defuse terrorist bombs before they can kill and maim.

The Army has battled to keep abreast of the terrorists in the constantly evolving environment of booby trap bombs, ambushes and radio-controlled devices. Sometimes the operators have been lucky but on occasions they have paid with their lives while attempting to defuse a bomb.

At the time of publication, Colonel STEVE SMITH MBE was a serving Army officer and commanded the bomb disposal school for all three Services. Prior to this appointment he controlled the UK's counter-terrorist bomb disposal response worldwide for three years.

In the early 1980s he was a bomb disposal operator in Belfast. Steve Smith was awarded the MBE in 1993 for his work in Northern Ireland.

Music Review

The Band of The Royal Mechanical & Electrical Engineers - Conductor: Major Ian Peaple

Recorded in February 2004, this very polished recording of the REME Band in concert mode is highly entertaining, including pieces often heard on the concert platform but rarely recorded.

Major Ian Peaple has prepared this recording with great thought and rehearsed the band to a very high standard. Beautifully presented, this is a must for band followers and those who enjoy good music played to a very high standard.

The Corps Band's first Director of Music was Captain Denis Plater who had transferred from the Royal Tank Regiment. Its establishment had initially been set at one Band Sergeant, two Corporals, three Lance Corporals and thirty-four Musicians and as the musical standards began to improve, the Band soon started to undertake engagements across the whole of the British Isles.

Today, the Band's expertise is seen and heard all over the world and it enjoys an outstanding reputation for musical excellence. In past years the Band has toured extensively in the USA, Canada, Germany, Bosnia, Italy, Cyprus, Uzbekistan, Guatemala, Mexico and throughout the whole of the United Kingdom.

The Band possesses a diverse range of musical ensembles all of which are in frequent demand. These include a Concert Band, Marching Band, Big Band, Dance Band, Pop Group, Chamber Groups, Fanfare Trumpets and a Disco.

The repertoire includes the following:- Entry of the Gladiators, Festivo, 42nd Street, English Country Garden, Gabriel's Oboe, Big Bands in Concert, The Jungle Book, Sentimental, The Best of the Seekers, Old Scottish Melody (Auld Lang Syne), Largo al Factotum, Trumpet Blues and Cantabile, The Greatest Love of All, The Lady is a Tramp, Arte et Marte, O Still Small Voice, Corps March and lastly, the National Anthem.

Playing Time approximately 69 minutes 12 seconds (which is pretty exact really!)

Music Review

The Band of The Royal Logistic Corps is based near Camberley, Surrey. It is one of the 22 bands of the Corps of Army Music and they supply the musical support to the Royal Logistic Corps, the largest Corps in the Army, throughout the UK and overseas. The band is available for all kinds of military, private and corporate events in the UK or Worldwide.

It can offer many different forms of musical ensemble including Fanfare Team, Rock Band, Concert Band, Cabaret Band and Full Marching Band.

Nothing can match the splendour of a military band in uniform and its professionalism is second to none. Using a military band lends a degree of pomp and ceremony to an event – especially when you are at home writing a Newsletter for the Ex-Boys' Association!!

The Royal Logistic Corps makes up over 16% of the Army and whether the army is deployed on active duty or not you can guarantee that Soldiers and Officers of the Royal Logistic Corps, will be close by supplying, moving and coordinating supplies to keep the modern Army running smoothly listening to their band with pride!!!

The RLC Band supplies musical support to the largest Corps in the Army, in the UK, Europe and beyond. The band has a varied musical life to fulfil its time and to this end supplies many different types of ensemble and music from classical strings to rock music. This makes the opportunities for band members to pursue far more than just military music.

Music Review

Just like Vol. 1, which was featured in the last Newsletter, Summer 2009, Issue 11, this is a brilliant collection of top class marches for the military band enthusiast.

Although not the best of album covers it does do what it says on the cover and all excellently played by the Regimental Band of the Coldstream Guards.

The quality of recording is good and the tunes are easy to listen. A great album, with some rousing music! Reminds me of Wellington Barracks at about 11:00 Hrs!

With 57 pieces of music to choose from and with at 116 beats per minute, you'll be 'footdrilling' your way around the house in no time!!

Get your Ammo Drill Boots on and start playing this album at full volume. You will not regret buying this great Compact Disc – your next door neighbours might though!

With gracious thanks (to the late) Raymond Jackson otherwise better know as

JAK

Raymond Jackson, (pen name JAK) of the London Evening Standard, was one of Britain's best-known newspaper cartoonists. "JAK" was born Raymond Allen Jackson on 11 March 1927 in Marylebone, London. He trained as a commercial artist at Willesden School of Art after a period in the Army Education Corps where he taught painting "in the style of Jackson Pollock". After working for an advertising agency and various magazines including Punch and Lilliput, he joined the Evening Standard in 1952. Starting as a general artist and illustrator on the television page, he eventually in 1965 succeeded "Vicky" as the Standard's Political Cartoonist.

"JAK" was a skilled draughtsman who created detailed scenes populated by a variety of sharply observed characters, drawn in ink on 17" x 21 1/2" abraded board using a mapping pen and a brush. His figures were distinguished by having three fingers on their hands and he signed his name, in capitals with characteristic "blob" serifs, in the bottom right or left corner. Many of his cartoons were republished in a series of Christmas annuals. His framed drawings were collected by many of the subjects who appeared in them. Some of his cartoons are in public archives including the Victoria & Albert Museum. The Queen's Elm pub in Chelsea was once decorated throughout with his cartoons.

He was a founder member of the British Cartoonists' Association in 1965 and admired by fellow cartoonists. As well as the Evening Standard, he also drew for the Mail on Sunday, the Daily Express and the Sunday Express and the SAS Association.

He died in Wimbledon, South-West London, on 27th July 1997.

Why soldiers should be over 42 and not 18 years Old

Kindly sent in by

Martin Fox (Alamein Platoon – 1981-1982)

I am over 42 and the Armed Forces thinks I'm too old to track down terrorists. You can't be older than 42 to join the military..

They've got the whole thing ass-backwards. Instead of sending 18-year olds off to fight, they ought to take us old guys. You shouldn't be able to join a military unit until you're at least 35. For starters: Researchers say 18-year-olds think about sex every 10 seconds. Old guys only think about sex a couple of times a day, leaving us more than 28,000 additional seconds per day to concentrate on the enemy.

Young guys haven't lived long enough to be cranky and a cranky soldier is a dangerous soldier. 'My back hurts! I can't sleep, I'm tired and hungry' We are impatient and maybe letting us kill some Terrorist that desperately deserves it will make us feel better and shut us up for a while. An 18-year-old doesn't even like to get up before 10 a.m. Old guys always get up early to pee. Besides, like I said, I'm tired and can't sleep and since I'm already up, I may as well be up killing some fanatical person.

If captured we couldn't spill the beans because we'd forget where we put them. In fact, name, rank and serial number would be a real stretch. Boot Camp would be easier for old guys. We're used to getting screamed and yelled at and we're used to soft food. We've also developed an appreciation for guns. We've been using them for years as an excuse to get out of the house, away from the screaming and yelling.

They could lighten up on the obstacle course however. I've been in combat and didn't see a single 20-foot wall with rope hanging over the side, nor did I ever do any push-ups after completing Basic Training. Actually, the running part is kind of a waste of energy, too. I've never seen anyone outrun a bullet!

An 18-year-old has the whole world ahead of him. He's still learning to shave, to start up a conversation with a pretty girl. He still hasn't figured out that a baseball cap has a brim to shade his eyes, not the back of his head. These are all great reasons to keep our kids at home to learn a little more about life before sending them off into harm's way.

And finally, let us old guys track down those dirty rotten coward terrorists. The last thing an enemy would want to see is a couple of million mad old farts with attitudes and automatic weapons who know that their best years are already behind them.

This is a Bugle Call for Association Members to submit contributions to the Old Codger's revamped and most improved Photo Gallery contained within our website. This is where members can place photos and details of their service-life after Boys' School and let us know a little about their families and interest etc.

At this improved photo section, members can now “hover” their mouse over a photo and see a “Now and Then” photo! For those interested in making contact with old friends, you can place your search details on the Forum, doing so will allow other members to see it and hopefully someone may know of the individual's whereabouts.

Below are some examples already posted on the website, please take a look on the website: -

Having the Old Codger's Page is particularly useful at Reunion times to identify lost pals! For example:-

In Boys' Service

In the Army

In Retirement

So please send us YOUR contribution, if you have not yet done so! What we need is one, or more, photos showing any aspect of your life during or after Boys School, including family.... In fact, just anything you like... It's YOUR personal photo-album and only visible to other members of the Ex-Boys Association.

Lost Pals

For those interested in making contact with old friends, you can place your search details on the Forum, doing so will allow other members to see it and hopefully someone may know of the individual's whereabouts.

Alternatively, you can contact Bill Chamberlain directly, (see the Contacts section) who, will wherever possible, conduct a search using the UK Info CD (purchased by the Association). We have been successful in locating a considerable number of "lost pals" and it helps if you can provide additional information:

- First name and any second initial
- Current age (approx)
- Where the person hailed from
- His wife's name
- Last known location
- Any one or more of the above bits of information will allow the search to be narrowed down

Hopefully we can "make your day" and you can meet up with those "lost pals" at one of our next Reunion Dinners!

Vacancy One

Ex Boys & Lost Pals

It has been found necessary to circulate the Membership to see if there are any of you interested in coming on board, to take over from Bill Chamberlain, the sourcing of ex-Boys and to assist those seeking to locate ex-Pals.

Bill has decided that at the end of 2009, at the very latest, he will relinquish this voluntary work. Having carried out this role out for over 5 years - undertaking searches, assisting in maintaining the Roll and contacting ex-Boys by whatever means possible and also trying to help ex Boys find Lost Pals, he feels it is time to take a break.

This role is of major importance, as many of you will know from experience and requires someone who has - total discretion, takes pride in attention to detail, a good memory, spare time and above all, an interest in all the aspects of this rewarding role.

As with our other Admin roles, this is a voluntary position.

If you are interested and wish to discuss this position in more detail, please email Bill, also supplying a contact home phone number:

Public Relations Administrator

We are still looking for an individual to come on board as our Public Relations Administrator. This is a newly created role and we see this position as being crucial to ensuring the profile of the Association is brought to the attention of other bodies such as liaising with Military sites, as well as the Press and other Organizations.

As with our other Admin roles, this is a voluntary position.

If you are interested and wish to discuss this position in more detail, please email Bill, also supplying a contact home phone number:

Neil and I met in 8 Fd Wksp, Colchester in 1990. We were both on our first commissioned post, I as Stores Pl Comd of the RAOC Stores Section, he the Admin Officer of the unit. He was a hard working man who had time for everyone. Ever willing to help anyone, he was a very popular man with soldiers and officers alike.

We both came to Cyprus on Ex Lion Sun 90 and having been posted to Cyprus before he showed me round the local area on our time off. Having enjoyed Cyprus so much on exercise and thanks to Neil for showing me round, my wife Liz and I now live here in retirement. We were shocked to hear of his passing at such a young age especially knowing that Neil was a fit man. Our deepest condolences belatedly go to his family.

PRIVATE DAVID LADLEY

MAJOR D. M. BRAITHWAITE writes:—

The news of Private David Ladley's death as a result of a car accident came as a great shock to everybody who knew and worked with him.

An Ex-Junior Entrant young Ladley joined Regimental Wing COD Chilwell in May this year on posting from Training Battalion and Depot. He was a quiet young man who settled down quickly and soon became a useful member of the 'Orderly Room Team.'

An athlete of some potential at middle and long distance he, although only with us a short time, represented the Unit at the Travers Clarke Competition.

For his wife and young son there can be no recompense but some consolation in the high regard in which he was held by his colleagues. To them we offer our deepest sympathy.

Honours and Awards

Members of the Ex-Boys' Association may be interested to know that Her Majesty The Queen has recently given her name to a new form of recognition for the families of British Service personnel killed while serving their country.

The new Elizabeth Cross and miniature are to be awarded to the relatives of Her Majesty's Forces personnel killed on active service, together with a Memorial Scroll signed by Her Majesty The Queen.

The Elizabeth Cross will be granted to the next of kin of Armed Forces personnel killed on operations or as a result of terrorism in a mark of national recognition for their loss.

This is the first time the name of a reigning monarch has been given to a new award since the George Cross was instituted in 1940 by King George VI for acts of bravery by both civilians and the military. Prior to this, the Victoria Cross was introduced by Queen Victoria in 1856 for acts of gallantry by the Armed Forces.

Next of kin will receive the Elizabeth Cross - a sterling silver emblem in the shape of a cross over a wreath - plus a Memorial Scroll signed by The Queen, which will bear the name of the person who died.

The Elizabeth Cross and Memorial Scroll will not just be granted to families who have lost loved ones in the recent operations in Iraq and Afghanistan; The Queen's recognition will also be available to the families of those who died in conflicts dating back to 1948, including the Korean War, the Falklands conflict and operations in Northern Ireland.

The Elizabeth Cross

In a message to Her Armed Forces, Her Majesty The Queen said:

"This seems to me a right and proper way of showing our enduring debt to those who are killed while actively protecting what is most dear to us all. The solemn dignity which we attach to the names of those who have fallen is deeply engrained in our national character. As a people, we accord this ultimate sacrifice the highest honour and respect"

Chief of the Defence Staff, Air Chief Marshal Sir Jock Stirrup, said:

"I hope that the families of those who have given their lives will wear the Elizabeth Cross with pride and pass it on to future generations so that they too might know the price that has been paid for their freedom and way of life."

Defence Secretary Bob Ainsworth said:

"We owe so much to those who have died to protect our country and our way of life. The Elizabeth Cross was recommended by the military chiefs to Her Majesty to recognise the huge debt this country owes to the families those brave individuals have been left behind."

Below is an example of the Memorial Scroll signed by Her Majesty The Queen that is to be awarded to the relatives of Her Majesty's Forces personnel killed on active service, together with the new Elizabeth Cross

The arms of the Elizabeth Cross bear floral symbols representing England (Rose), Scotland (Thistle), Ireland (Shamrock) and Wales (Daffodil). The reverse of the cross will be engraved with the name of the person in whose memory it is granted.

The scroll is on parchment-style paper, headed with the Royal Coat of Arms and the following words: 'This Scroll Commemorates... who gave his/her life for Queen and Country on...'. The scroll will bear the signature of Her Majesty The Queen in the upper left-hand corner.

This is an article kindly sent in by ex-boy Richard Bond and it describes his Remembrance Day Parade of 2009.

"Men and women of all ages wearing a variety of headgear from berets, Glengarrys and Gurkha Hats and most festooned with medals from campaigns from all over the world. We presented our tickets to smiling and polite Customs Officers in uniform and then stepped on the hallowed gravel of Horse Guards making our way across the square to find Colonel Browning who was standing rather self consciously holding his plastic covered card bearing our marker number B12. He, unlike us, was sporting the obligatory Bowler Hat and proved to be a charming and welcoming "contingent coordinator".

There were only six of us but for some time we were worried that the two members from Birmingham were not going to arrive but with time to spare they did arrive. Our contingent represented the Birmingham Branch, the Vehicle Specialist Branch and of course the largest Branch of all, RAOConLine. We formed up and found ourselves between the REME Apprentices Association and the Home Guard Association who were dressed for the period with one rather elegant gentleman looking oddly like Cpl. Jones from Dad's Army.

I suppose we were all feeling a little self conscious about marching and I for one donning a beret with RAOC badge for the first time in many many years. But once we had stepped off and shuffled rather than marched in to Whitehall under the arch of Horse Guards I for one started to feel a little more comfortable.

There were some odd dress codes about despite requests from the Royal British Legion to "dress appropriately" with two of the REME contingent in jeans and coats draped over their shoulders and one ex member of the Army Air Corps in Anorak and Beret with the longest beard and pony tail on parade! We then stood for some half an hour waiting for the ceremony to start which did so but caught us by surprise due to the fact that whilst we were not far from the Cenotaph (actually directly in front of the Horse Boxes) we could not hear or see anything. We did however have a piped com entry coming from a speaker close by and a very large TV screen just ahead (I could have stayed at home for this I thought during one freezing moment).

The Artillery round fired to commence the 2 minutes silence was deafening and not as it seems when broadcast on TV and many old veterans jumped out of their skin. One poor fellow was taken ill just prior to this and had to be taken away by paramedics. So the Service started and we all sang our hearts out and then the moment I think we had all been waiting for the March Past and Salute, first at the Cenotaph and then again at the rear of Horse Guards. The commands were given and we stepped off at 100 paces to the minute but keeping the step was a nightmare as we had no one to call the step, the Home Guard contingent coordinator was calling the step but very badly and without rhythm and sin of all sins, "left left left right left" No no no we thought....!! Left Right Left Right" - but then we clicked, just short of the Cenotaph we picked up the beat of the drum from the Massed Bands and as we slipped into rhythmic step chins up, shoulders back and past we went taking our lead from the REME group we had fallen in with (our single rank of 6) - past the Cenotaph amid cheers and applause that came so unexpectedly I nearly stumbled. I felt somewhat a fraud at this point and not in any way deserving of such a welcome but soon realised that really the cheering and applause is really about those soldier who are in Afghanistan and Iraq now and who are the Veterans of the future. It was also odd so see rows of Police Officers standing and applauding with the crowd, I held my head high with my sholders back and marched as if Sergeant Major Fellowes was watching my every step!

An so it was, down Whitehall into Parliament Square and then right in the Horse Guards for the columns to march past the saluting dias. The pace had picked up now and we had remembered how to "step short" again and how to eyes right with a flourish and look the saluting officer in the eye... in this case it was the grey, sour faced Will Hutton Secretary of Defence and the "mystery" Royal who turned out to be The Earl of Wessex (Prince Edward) in the the uniform of Royal Honorary Colonel of the Royal Wessex Yeomanry - What surprised me was his complexion as we passed him.. It was oddly flawless and without a single blemish or wrinkle and the colour somewhat of a pale tan... very odd indeed.

I have lasting memories of general friendly banter, of old soldiers resplendent in row and upon row of medals which in some cases were theirs and the fathers medals. Of the many foreign veterans from all races and corners of the world, the Gurkha contingent with their officers looking so dashing in their hats and of the small children wearing the medals of the dead hero fathers from these current wars all marching with pride in their smart little blazers.

Once we have reassembled back on Horse Guards we started to make our farewells and reflect on what had been a wonderfully fulfilling if tiring morning most of which was spent standing about waiting. We all were firm in our desire to do it all again! Bernie and went for a drink in a pub off Parliament Square which was full of smartly dressed impossibly young naval officers, Parachute Regiment veterans and many younger members of the Parachute Regiment also. Even as we stood outside the pub foreign tourists stopped and asked many of these medal festooned veterans to pose for photographs and seeing a 76 year old former para being photographed in front of a 25 year old serving para sporting so many medals too was a sobering thought.

Bernie and I had a wonderful time and made an online friendship a real one while we shared this morning and excellent day honouring our dead of so many wars. We have to do this again but we need a very big increase in numbers to make a real impact on the size of the contingent we send next year. I am sincerely glad I made the effort to go and it was wonderful to meet Bernie and the other blokes - I wore my beret in regulation style!!"
